Augusta Highway – Redhill Intersection Lighting

Better lighting at a busy intersection on the Augusta Highway will ensure safer driving at night.

The installation of road lighting at a staggered intersection in Redhill. The two T-junctions are the intersection of the Augusta Highway with the Redhill to Brinkworth Road (also known as Ellis Street) and the highway's intersection with Torrs Gap Road.

“I have long lobbied the Government to address this issue, this highway is a key transport and freight route and these works will not only benefit local but all road users who frequently use this route.

The $200,000 lighting upgrade is one of the commitments the State Government made as part of my agreement with the Premier.” Mr Brock said.

“Work on this project is expected to commence in the coming week and be completed by the end of February 2015.

Speed restrictions will be in place while the work is being carried out.

I urge all drivers utilising this road to take care during this construction period and I looks forward to its completion.”
